DTESS RESPONSE

HOW YOU CAN HELP:

1. Please refrain from visiting the DTESS area.
2. Make a donation which goes toward the ability for us to mobilize quickly to purchase and provide phones for communications, food, personal hygiene products, cleanings supplies, access to transportation, plus other needs that emerge.

All donations are being received by Network of Inner City Community Services Society (NICCSS) and will receive a charitable tax receipt.

In these uncertain times...

WARREN WILLIAMS
PRESIDENT

I want to start off by thanking all of our members for their commitment and hard work on behalf of Vancouver residents, their families, and communities. Our work across all sectors will help keep everyone safe. From Community Health and Health Science workers, who along with others at Carnegie Centre and other worksites in the Downtown East Side, are on the front line; to custodians and members in schools who are taking on extra work to ensure everyone's safety; to Parks and Recreation workers and others who are being deployed; and to those who are staying home to help flatten the curve – we are all in this together.

The current COVID-19 crisis makes these times unprecedented. We are facing a lot of unknowns, with many questions and concerns. Safety and health are the top priorities for each and every one of us. Things are in a constantly evolving state and our employers are also scrambling to ensure that services are provided and that everyone stays safe. Things are changing and being determined sometimes on an hourly basis, not only in terms of public health, but also in terms of what action needs to be taken.

Bargaining is continuing for members at Emily Carr University of Art + Design and the bargaining team at Langara College is setting up bargaining sessions with the employer.

These are challenging times. Some of our members are being laid off, others are working from home, and some are being redeployed to assist in other locations or sectors. In BC we are fortunate to have a government that respects our collective agreements, unlike some others across Canada who have suspended public sector contracts.

Workers who are redeployed may be asked to take on work that is not what they currently do. An example is child care. It's essential that child care is available for all frontline workers who need it. Our emergency and health services cannot function without these essential workers. We simply can't let that happen.

Members have lots of questions about what return to work looks like, what safety protocols are in place, and wages and benefits to name a few. Your union does not have all the answers to what and when things will happen but I commit to you that we will continue to share information as we receive it. Please check the links at the end of my column for online resources.

This is a time when our union values of solidarity need to be embraced by everyone in society, so that we all act in the best interests of our communities and our most vulnerable citizens. Together we will beat this virus.

You have all been putting in long hours during this pandemic and there continues to be much work ahead. Since many of us are working from home and practicing physical distancing, we really need to find alternative ways to stay connected. This will help us stay healthy.

As we go through the coronavirus pandemic, one of the things we are learning is that we are unable to reach all our members quickly. Getting information to you as fast as possible is really important. I am asking all members to send their personal email address to email@cupe15.org so that we can connect with you and you can stay connected to us.

Secretary-Treasurer's Report

by Sally Bankiner, Secretary-Treasurer

SALLY BANKINER
SECRETARY-TREASURER

In this unparalleled time of crisis for so many of you I wanted to write something that may be a bit inspirational and encouraging. The only thing I could come up with right at this moment is what my dad used to say when we were really sad or anxious about something: "Don't worry, this too will pass". I didn't find it all that encouraging back then when I was a kid mostly because I didn't understand what it meant and what he was trying to say. Now I get that he was actually feeling the same and wanted me to know that as bad as I feel right then, it will get better, eventually... It always did.

There is not much encouraging news on the horizon for many of you and my heart aches for everyone who is suffering both physically, mentally, emotionally, and financially right now. I am for the first time almost speechless as to what to write. The sheer gravity of our current situation is breathtaking to the point of being overwhelming. In challenging times people often have a source of comfort: someone they are drawn to for that comfort; volunteering, community, friends, work, family, or spiritual beliefs. Now, it's a bit awkward to be drawn towards anything because of fear. We need to rely on other ways to keep in touch with each other and feel connected even though we are facing unparalleled uncertainty.

Please know that our staff at the union office is working non-stop trying to deal with all of our employers to protect your rights. Remember that we have 18 different collective agreements and almost 8,000 members who we service. Please be kind and patient with our stewards who are doing their best trying to answer all of your questions and concerns. Remember that these stewards are facing exactly what you are facing and many have already been laid off work. We are all in the same boat as the saying goes and we are all trying to do our best. Any words of encouragement or kindness you can send to people that are helping or have helped you would be welcomed and appreciated.

We have, of course, postponed our April steward training. I really hope that we can get at least one class going prior to June but we will have to make that determination as things progress, so keep reviewing updates on our website.

Our office building is closed to walk-in service; however, our staff is still hard at work inside. If you need to reach the office, you still call the office number or email the general email address. Our website is also packed with information for every sector on any changes to your working conditions. As soon as changes happen that we are made aware of we get them posted. There are several pages of breaking news or top stories so you may need to scroll through a few pages to find the information relevant to your sector.

Unfortunately timing is everything most of the time, and this year is not an exception. The Union and Society are governed by their bylaws and ours state that the election of your Executive Board is next month. With mass layoffs looming and most underway, we have broached postponing our elections for a few months with CUPE National as some members very strongly feel that we need to be focusing all of our energy on our membership and not elections. Those discussions, however, did not go as we had hoped and the CUPE National President has made the ruling that we must continue as scheduled with our elections. I for one understand that it is going to be very difficult for candidates to campaign as the election of our Board is likely the last thing on our member's mind. Please keep in mind if you are contacted by a candidate that National wants our members to have the confidence that even though these times are unprecedented for all of us, the business of the union carries on and we are here to serve you. Remember, the election process is important as the people you elect will be making decisions that affect each of you, so please exercise your right. It makes a difference!
